Commercial activities studies of AG, DOIM continue on schedule

The commercial activities studies for the Adjutant General and Directorate of Information Management continue on schedule.

The U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command contractor, KPMG, has developed a data reporting system for capturing workload information.

The time period for data collection is scheduled over the next four months, with a possible extension to six months. This information will be included in the Performance Work Statement, on which private enterprise will base its bid. It is also utilized for developing the government's in-house bid, the "Most Efficient Organization," or "MEO."

"Functional managers and workers are contributing significantly to the development of the PWS," said Santoro Salerno, CA program manager at DRM. "We also established a POM command-wide CA Steering Committee to oversee the development of the PWS and answer concerns raised by management, workers and KPMG."

The CA Steering Committee is co-chaired by Wesley Hood, deputy garrison commander, and Lt. Col. Gordon Hamilton, chief of staff. The CA Steering Committee's purpose is to ensure timely and accurate information is gathered, reviewed, and approved for inclusion into the PWS. The committee also is briefed monthly by KPMG and advised on the overall progress of the studies.

Recently a CA telephone information line was installed for employees to voice questions or concerns regarding the CA process. The CA telephone information line number is 242-6677. The line has been up and running for a few weeks, and no questions have been received. "That's a testament to management getting the word out to its employees, but we stand ready to answer any concerns as best we can," said Salerno.

For more information on commercial activities contacts, see listing on page 2.

Fingerprinting event part of Child Abuse Prevention Month

By Michael Cleary
Outreach and Prevention Specialist

In support of Child Abuse Prevention Month during April, I would like to take a few minutes to encourage parents to accompany their children to attend our program: "Fingerprinting Your Child," April 28, 2-4:15 p.m.

The program will be held at the La Mesa Community Center and is being co-sponsored by the La Mesa Youth Center. Besides fingerprinting your child, the event will feature a clown for entertainment, and ice cream will be available after children complete the fingerprinting.

Crime Stoppers Volunteers of Monterey County are providing the FREE finger printing. Older children are welcome to attend without their parents and information on footprinting infants will be available.

Since April is designated by the military as "Child Abuse Prevention Month," we'd like to take this opportunity to praise the many volunteers for all the work they do with children. While we need to continue our efforts to eliminate child abuse, we also wish to note the positive things being done in this community. The Family Service Center would like to express appreciation for the many parents dedicated to helping support the entire military community.

There are many coaches, classroom volunteers, Boy Scout and Girl Scout leaders, PTA volunteers and tutors, to name a few, who sacrifice their time to support our children.

TRICARE Standard procedures change concerning maternity care, benefits

Expecting a baby? Congratulations! If you use TRICARE Standard, you'll need to know about your maternity benefits.

Your nearby military treatment facility offers high-quality care with state-of-the-art equipment at the most affordable costs. However, in some cases, military facilities cannot provide the maternity care you will need and will issue you what is called a "NAS" – a Nonavailability Statement. This will allow you to go to a civilian doctor or hospital during your pregnancy and delivery.

During the past few years, the rules about maternity care have changed frequently. You now will need a NAS for both civilian outpatient and inpatient care if: you are pregnant; use TRICARE Standard or Extra; and live within the surrounding area (approximately 40 miles) of a military treatment facility.

If you go to a civilian doctor or hospital without a NAS issued to you from the military facility, your claims won't be paid by TRICARE. If you decide to go to a civilian provider, it is best to ask about the NAS as soon as you find out you are pregnant. Speak with a Health Benefits Advisor at your military treatment facility or with a Beneficiary Services Representative at your local TRICARE Service Center for help. The maternity NAS will cover you from your first prenatal visit through your postpartum visit (six weeks after delivery).

Please note: A NAS is not required if you have other health insurance, which pays before TRICARE. Additionally, if you use TRICARE Prime, a NAS is not necessary. Your PCM will arrange for all your maternity care.

For more information, contact a Beneficiary Services Representative at (800) 242-6788. (Courtesy of Foundation Health Federal Services for TRICARE)

Tips offer suggestions to cut down on spending

If you think there's no way you can cut back on your spending, think again!

Saving money by spending less isn't brain surgery, but it takes discipline. The main ideas are: shop wherever possible on sale, deal or discount, buy value, not price; take care of the things you own; be especially careful on large purchases; never buy on impulse, always plan your purchases; compare prices whenever possible and pinch pennies – they soon become dollars.

Saving category: Food and Groceries

Use a shopping list based on menus. Forget impulse shopping or just wandering the aisles.

Check your cupboards and refrigerator before shopping to make sure you don't buy what you already have.

In your list, include items that are in season and check the store circular for specials.

Try house brands or generic brands. Their quality may surprise you.

Never shop when you're hungry. You buy more. Always compare unit prices. Those little white stickers help you sort "deals" and "heels."

Cut out use of convenience foods, such as frozen dinners, vegetables, or entrees. Cooking from scratch is cheaper.

Make food shopping a weekly affair. Avoid "fill in" trips during the week just to make sure you have ever everything.

Be creative and use leftovers. Don't waste a thing. Make sure your store checkout person is alert and accurate. If in doubt about any item, be sure to check tape.

Buyer larger cuts and sizes. Divide them up into packages when you get home and freeze them.

Grow your own herbs – all you need is a small garden.

Remember, you may use coupons in the commissary. Even with coupons, others brands may still be cheaper. Always compare.

It's usually more economical to buy beverages by the case.

Make your own baby food. All you need

Presidio Police offer stranger danger information

Children and young teens who are old enough to go out alone or with friends – to the playground, the park, the shopping mall, school, or the movies – need rules to follow should they ever find themselves confronted with a potentially dangerous stranger.

Who is a stranger? A stranger can be someone you've never seen before. If he comes up and introduces himself to you, he is still a stranger. If our friend introduces her to you, she is still a stranger. A stranger isn't always just someone you've never seen before. Anyone you see a lot, but just say "hi" to is a stranger too. Even if you do see the person all of the time – like a school bus driver – this person is a stranger. When you are in doubt, ask your parents who is a stranger and who is a friend. If in doubt ask your parents whom you can trust.

How do strangers lure and trick children into dangerous situations? Some use lures such as candy, ice cream, stuffed animals, new dolls, bicycles, or something they believe you will want more than anything else in the world. Some use tricks. The stranger might tell you things like: "Your mother had a car accident!" "Your father had a heart attack!" or "There's a fire in your house!" Don't believe a stranger when they say things like this; they are just trying to trick or scare you into going away with them.

Stranger smart checklist for parents

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children regards any child whose whereabouts are unknown to their parents, guardian, or legal custodian, as a missing child. The number of missing children continues to climb each year. If not found, many of these children can be caught in a web of criminal or sexual exploitation.

These children are from every walk of life – every socioeconomic group, racial and ethnic background. They are taken from areas including playgrounds, streets, school or their own backyards. Help "stranger-proof" your children and teenagers.

The basics to being stranger smart

Do your children know their full name and address?

Do they know what city and state they live in?

Do they know their phone number including area code?

Do they know how to dial the police emergency number (9-1-1)? When calling the police, can your child supply the following information:

Someone has taken your child. Can your child accurately describe where whereabouts?

Someone has threatened your child or offered him a new toy. Can your child accurately describe the stranger?

Your child is lost or hurt. Does your child know how to reach you at work and have a number to call in a real emergency? Who can your child trust if you can't be reached?

A plan for emergency situations

If you and your child are out shopping and become separated, you should have a designated meeting place.

Pick not only a meeting place, but also an emergency telephone number to call if this happens.

If you are supposed to meet your child at school and you are called away to the hospital or someplace else, who can pick your child up? Make a list of people who have permission to get your children when you cannot. Code words are also a way to protect your children. If you think your child can remember a code word like "oranges," for example, then assign a word to him. Tell your child you will only give that code word to someone when you absolutely cannot come to get him yourself. Only you and your child and the person you tell should know what the word is.

Once you have used a code word, pick out a new one. Tell your children not to give anyone the code word and never to ask for it. The adult you trust to pick up your child should say the code word right away.

What should you tell your children

If your child meets a stranger who asks them for help, ALERT your child to be on guard.

Tell your child it is okay to say "no" to strangers.

When in danger tell your child to run away, scream, kick and make it hard for a stranger.

Do not buy items with your child's name on them, such as jackets, hats, or lunch boxes.

Instruct your child's school or daycare center not to release your child to anyone other than yourself, unless you have told them otherwise. You should tell them in person.

Tell your child never to accept a gift from a stranger.

Instruct your child to question authority when necessary. The police are here to help, but sometimes a bad stranger will use a fake badge and claim he is a store detective, a police officer, or a security guard. Tell your child to be alert. Your child should ask someone to check the stranger's identity. Real law enforcement officials won't mind if your child checks them out.

Instruct your child or teenager to tell you where they are going, who they will be with, and when they will be home. Have them promise to call you if they are going to be late or change their plans.

Never leave a young child unattended in a car, store, shopping mall or any other public place.

Remember: Safety rules are not intended to scare children. That is why it is important to talk to young people about his topic openly and honestly. The more tools you can give your children to protect themselves, the less you will have to worry.

Remember: A stranger who tries to pick you up can be either a man or a woman. It's hard to tell the "bad guys" from the "good guys" just by the way they look. Most strangers are just average, ordinary people.
